

The Collective Experience's Mission of Taxism

A theology that offers a collective experience of compliance, compulsion and choice issues

Versus or as opposed to:

A government system designed to secure our life, liberties and pursuits of happiness - The United States of America

Can any of us, as Americans expect to meet the required revenues and current obligations under The Collective Experience's Mission of Taxism and still truly believe that Taxism will not become like its evil twin... Nazism. Taxism, like Nazism is an evil political religion. Taxism is about raising our hopes not raising revenues for our Nation. Our Nation and government needs revenues to fulfil the constitutional requirements of Article I, Section 8, Clause 1: "...to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States..."

Taxism is a political religion that does not create a government... because it has the power to take over our existing federal government.

The Collective Experience's Mission of Taxism

At some point I was going to talk about this. Ever the opponent of the ridiculous, I have no choice but to address the absurdity of this policy.

First the obvious; we pay tax our entire lives. But more importantly, we can presume that those who would pay the lion's share the tax annually that those same people would have contributed the lion's share of income tax over their lives (or capital gains).

I am not going to go further into tax rates and brackets (today), other than to say they are irrelevant to this discussion. What good reason is there to say that someone who is a law-abiding, hard-working, tax paying citizen is in good standing with his government one day, that if he dies the next day then he owes (his family does) half of his estate to the government?

Let me explain something to you. That's communism (or at least socialism). You can call it the redistribution of wealth, "paying the boatman," or just a tax, but I call it property of the state. No matter what you do, if you amass more than 'x' in your life you have to give half of that to the government. If you were to quantify that, using some simple straight percentages it would really seem preposterous. Let's try:

- work your entire life in 50% tax bracket
- leave over 50% of what remains to the government (its rightful owner)
- you realize (in your final moments) that you spent 75% of your life working for the state

Taxism is a political religion that does not create a government rather it will take over an existing government.
